

This is a printer-friendly version. The navigation and other unnecessary elements have been removed.

Monday, March 26, 2007

Map

Plans progress for new station

Placentia is pushing forward with its plans to build the county's 12th Metrolink station. The cost: $31.7 million, which will be funded by state and local monies.

The Register

Placentia Metrolink station plans progress

Officials agree to fund $81,000 for the environmental portion of the project.

By ELLYN PAK and ADAM TOWNSEND
THE ORANGE COUNTY REGISTER

ORANGE

– Plans to build a Metrolink station in Placentia progressed after transportation officials agreed today to fund $81,000 for the environmental portion of the project.

Orange County Transportation Authority planners had previously received approval for state funds that would go toward planning.

The station, which would be the 12th in the county, would be built on the south end of the Burlington Northern Santa Fe railroad between Melrose and Main streets. Buena Park, which began building its own station in December 2005, is nearing completion.

Placentia's project could cost more than $31.7 million, which would be funded by state and local money. The first phase is estimated to cost $16.6 million and includes building a new station, track, platform, shelters, parking and bus access.

The station would be an additional link to downtown Los Angeles. Plans would be incorporated into Placentia's downtown development plan.

Contact the writer: 714-704-3788 or epak@oregister.com